Oakwood restaurant lives to serve another day

OAKWOOD - Oakwood City Council decided Monday night to give La Parilla Mexican Restaurant a second chance.

The council decided not to suspend the alcoholic beverage license of La Parilla for a violation of two ordinances during this year's Cinco de Mayo celebration.

Hipolito Goico, attorney for the restaurant, stood before the council and told them that his clients were aware of their mistakes and that necessary actions have been implemented to rectify the situation.

Diego Velasquez, manager of La Parilla, said he is very happy with their second chance.

“Very happy with what they said and we are aware of mistakes we made. It will never happen again, it was a mistake we made and it won’t happen again,” said Velasquez.

The council did let La Parilla know that this violation would be in their file and in the future if any other indiscretions occur this violation would be used against them.
